

Section 4

Section 4 is the largest in the cemetery with about 1000 graves. It is in two sections. The western section is a sunken area which is reached from the west from paths that lead down from section 5 and from the north by a single path. The eastern section is at the same level as sections 6 and 7.

The map displays a grid of memorial inscriptions in Lansdown Cemetery. The grid is labeled with letters A through Z across the top and numbers 1 through 10 down the right side. Each cell in the grid contains a small rectangular box representing a memorial inscription. The inscriptions are arranged in rows and columns, with some larger green circular markers placed on the map. The names and details within the boxes are too small to read clearly, but they appear to be organized alphabetically or by row. The map also shows some trees and a path on the left side.

From The North Devon Journal of Thu 18 Feb 1875 p8: LITTLE TORRINGTON. THE death is announced of the Rev. Richard Whieldon Baddeley, B.A., who was recently curate here. This was, we believe, his first and only curacy. He died at Bath, on the 6th inst., at the early age of thirty-four years, leaving a widow and children. From Trewman's Exeter Flying Post of Wed 17 Feb 1875 p7: LITTLE TORRINGTON.—In our obituary column, we have copied from the Midland Counties Herald an announcement of the death of the Rev. Richard Whieldon Baddeley, who was curate of this parish three years ago. Mr. Baddeley made some efforts in literature, and published "The Village of the West," "The Poet Boakes," &amp;c. He embodied some of his clerical experiences in a very fictitious romance, entitled "Only a Curate," which appeared in Belgravia, and upon which we commented pretty plainly at the time. This was shortly after his leaving this parish, and we believe this was his only curacy. Mr. Baddeley, who was married, died on Saturday week, at Bath, aged thirty-four years. The death of Arthur Wheeldon (sic) Baddeley, aged 17, was registered 1885/Q3 Bath. 		'a person of education would feel very awkwardly situated as an emigrant without some authority under government'. Although his request was not immediately granted, he was in fact made a Special Heemraad for Albany soon after his arrival at the Cape. This was a proprietary party, consisting of Major Pigot and his family - including his young wife whom he married ten days before embarkation - and indentured servants recruited in Chieveley, which he described as 'a very populous village and the poor rates very high'. Deposits were paid for 20 men, and the party embarked at Deptford in the Northampton after approval had been obtained from the Colonial Department for last minute changes to be made to the official list of names. One man, William Gibbs, and his family deserted the party at Gravesend shortly before the ship sailed on 13 December 1819. The Northampton reached Table Bay on 26 March 1820 and Algoa Bay on 30 April. Two children, Sarah Marshall and William Goddard, and one woman, Mary Quince, died of smallpox during the voyage. Major Pigot was granted land on the left bank of Blaauwkrantz River which he named Pigot Park." (‘Heemraad’ a council, or member of a council, to assist a magistrate.) The list of the members of the party (based upon the list at Cape Archives CO 136) includes: PIGOT, George 47. Gentleman farmer and retired Major of Dragoons. w Elizabeth 32. c Catherine 17, Eliza Sophia 15. There is also a reference to George Pigot in Status and Respectability in the Cape Colony, 1750-1870: A Tragedy of Manners by Robert Ross; Cambridge University Press, 1999. Colonial South Africa and the Origins of the Racial Order by Timothy J. Keegan has a reference on p64 to "This aspirant gentry - Thomas Philipps, Duncan Campbell, George Pigot and Donald Moodie being pre-eminent examples - led a furious agitation against Somerset's regime. Such men styled themselves the 'Albany radicals', and demanded larger land grants, tighter labour controls, appointment of local public office, and other prerequisites of access to official patronage (such as grants to urban plots)." An article in the Cape Argus of 31 Jan 2008 entitled How Lafferlarhoo became Charlotte refers to the Pigot party and its indentured servants.

From the burial register: Marie Caradini, aged 68, of 1 Richmond Hill, was buried on 18 Apr 1894. From the National Probate Calendar 1894: CARANDINI Maria of Melbourne Victoria widow died 13 April 1894 at Bath Administration (Limited) London 5 November to Fanny Ellen Hannah Morland (wife of sir Henry Morland) the attorney of Edward Hodson Palmer and Alexander Cameron Macdonald Effects £152 18s. From the Australian Dictionary of Biography:  Marie Carandini (1826-1894), prima donna, was baptized Maria on 1 February 1826 at St Matthew's Church of England, Brixton, London, daughter of James Burgess, coachman, and his wife Martha. The family arrived at Hobart Town as assisted immigrants in September 1833. On 11 March 1843 at St Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, Hobart, Maria married Jerome Carandini, the tenth marquis of Sarzano (1803-1870), who had arrived as an assisted immigrant in a troupe of musicians led by the Clarkes in January 1842. Carandini had been exiled from Italy in 1835 for revolutionary activities against Austrian overlords and claimed to have taught languages for many years in France and England. ... In 1869 Signor Carandini was pardoned by the Italian government but, soon after he returned to claim his confiscated estates, he died of gastric fever and inflammation of the lungs at Modena on 18 January 1870. In her last years Madame Carandini lived with her daughter at Richmond Hill, near Bath, where she died on 13 April 1894. She was survived by seven children. There was an obituary in The Advertiser (Adelaide) of Fri 20 Apr 1894 p3: DEATH OF MADAME CARANDINI.  A FAMOUS AUSTRALIAN SONGSTRESS. It will be with regret that all classes of society will learn of the death of Madame Carandini, which took place on April 13, at the residence of her daughter. Lady Moreland, at Bath, England, at the ripe age of 69. When quite a child Madame Carandini, then Marie Burgess, arrived with her parents in Tasmania, wither Mr. Burgess had been ordered for the sake of his health by his medical advisers. At the age of 17 Miss Marie Burgess married the Marquis Carandini, an Italian nobleman, whose

		patriotism had deprived him of all his property and exiled him from his native land. Madame Carandini's musical career began in Sydney as far back as 1841 and 1842. In 1854 she went from Tasmania to Melbourne, and by her exquisite singing as well as by her personal qualities took the public by storm. Her beautiful voice, her finished style, and that sympathetic quality which always put her in touch with her audience rendered Madame Carandini a most popular favorite throughout Australia. She was the first to establish operatic singing in the colonies, and in fact largely aided in the development of high class music here. In 1855, when Catherine Hayes visited Australia, the production of an opera became an established fact, and she appeared in "La Sonnambula" at the Theatre Royal, Melbourne, on October 22, 1855, ably supported by Madame Carandini, of whose talents she had the highest possible opinion. The rest of the company was fairly satisfactory and a chorus of 50 voices was got together for the occasion. "La Sonnambula" was followed by "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Norma," "The Bohemian Girl," and "Lucrezia Borgia," in each of which Madame Carandini appeared in conjunction with Catherine Hayes. After the departure of the latter a series of representations were given from time to time, in which the leading artistes were Madame Carandini, Signor Borsotti, and Madame Cailly. In 1858 an opera season was commenced in the Princess Theatre, and in the year following in the Theatre Royal, Madame Carandini appearing in both with Farquharson and Walter Sherwin. In subsequent years all the well-known operas were produced, and excellent singing, orchestration, and mounting were provided, in 1867 Mr. C. E. Horsley, a composer of repute, who had come to reside in Victoria, arranged some "Musical festivals," at which high-class music was supplied by Madame Carandini, assisted by her daughters, Rosina and Fannie. Till 1892 Madame Carandini lived in retirement, when she left the colonies for England with her daughter, Lady Moreland. On the occasion of her departure farewell concerts were given in her honor both in Melbourne and Adelaide. The latter took place on February 16, 1892, and a large and enthusiastic audience gathered in the Town Hall to do honor to an artiste whose name had been associated for so many years with the growth of music in the colonies. Among the audience were many who in the early days had frequently heard her and her talented daughters, and who in renewing these pleasant memories doubtless recalled again the scenes and forms of the days that were. Madame Carandini rendered the charming old Scotch song "Jessie, the flower o' Dunblane," and "The harp that once through Tara's halls," and the genuine feeling displayed by the audience during the rendering of those songs unmistakably showed in what affectionate remembrance she was held. Lady Moreland and Mrs. Palmer, her daughters, also sang

Lady Moreland left Australia nearly 20 years ago with the family on a concert tour to India, and whilst there married Captain Sir Henry Moreland, the head of the fort of Bombay, which position he held till his death, some four years ago. After the marriage she continued to lend her voice and musical talent in aid of the different charities of Bombay. Mrs. Palmer did not accompany her mother to England, but has since been a resident of Melbourne. The death notice in the Bath Chronicle and Weekly Gazette of Thu 19 Apr 1894 had:  DESAZANO— April 13, at 1, Richmond-hill, the residence of her daughter, Lady Morland, Marie Carandini, relict of the late Marquis de Sazano, Viscount Ferrario, Count de Ricci, aged 68.

A war was raging between the native Christians and the rest of the islanders, and, to assist the former. Commander Walter Croker, of the Favourite, 18, landed on June 24th with 90 officers, seamen and Marines, and joined a body of 1500 natives in the attack on a fastness five miles from the coast. In the act of storming, the natives deserted; and the British, having suffered very heavily, were obliged to retire. Croker was killed; and the first Lieutenant, Robert John Wallace Dunlop, was desperately wounded. The second Lieutenant, Edward Pelham Brenton von Donop, who succeeded to the command, not only carried off Croker's body under a terrible fire, but also, finding that the colours had been left behind during the retreat, returned with one man, and rescued them. 		From an article in The Independent of 30 May 2004 entitled Obsession on the history of collecting orchids: "The obsession was sustained and intensified by an extraordinary web of plant collectors working in Assam, Bhutan, Columbia. In India, and later in Burma, Major Robson Benson enlivened his career as a soldier by collecting orchids for the nurseryman Hugh Low." A description of a particular orchid in Orchid Species Bulletin (Brisbane, Jan 2001) has: Dendrobium crystallinum Rchb.f. is a widespread species that is distributed from northeast India, Burma (Myanmar) Thailand, Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam. It often grows on small trees in exposed situations between 900-1,700 m altitude. Colonel Robson Benson discovered it in Myanmar in 1867 and sent plants to Messrs. Veitch, where it flowered at their Chelsea Nursery in 1868. Heinrich Gustav Reichenbach described it in the Gardeners' Chronicle that same year. He gave it the specific epithet from the Latin crystallinus (crystalline) for the anther cap, which is covered with glassy papillae, giving it a crystalline appearance. There is an orchid named Vanda bensonii.

		From Munk's Roll Vol III p13: Sir George Smith Gibbes  b.1771 d.23 June 1851 MD FRCP  Sir George Smith Gibbes, MD, was born in 1771, and was the son of the Rev George Gibbes, DD, rector of Woodborough, co Wilts. He received his scholastic education at Southampton, under the Rev Dr Mant, father of the well-known bishop of that name. When sixteen years of age he was entered a commoner of Exeter college, Oxford, and as a member of that house graduated AB 17th February, 1792. Elected to a fellowship at Magdalen college he removed thither, and proceeded AM 21st May, 1795; MB 6th April, 1796; MD 11th April, 1799. He was admitted a Candidate of the College of Physicians 25th June, 1803, a Fellow 25th June, 1804, and was Harveian orator in 1817. He settled at Bath, where he practised with distinguished reputation and success for a long series of years. In 1804 he was elected physician to the Bath General hospital; in 1819 was appointed physician extraordinary to queen Charlotte, and in 1820 received the honour of knighthood. He was in the commission of the peace for the county of Somerset. About 1835 Sir George Gibbes retired from the active exercise of his profession and removed to Cheltenham, whence he withdrew to Sidmouth, and died there on the 23rd June, 1851, aged 80. He was buried in the family vault at Woodborough, and is commemorated by a mural tablet in the church of All Saints, Sidmouth, of which his son the Rev Heneage Gibbes is the present incumbent. Sir George was a fellow of the Royal and of several other scientific and literary societies, foreign and domestic, and contributed several papers to their transactions: he was the author of-  Observations on the Component parts of Animal Matters, and on their Conversion into a substance resembling Spermaceti. 8vo. - 1796. 		service by the sentence of a court martial, and after he had already embarked and was on his passage”. From The British Medical Journal Vol. 1, No. 3346 (Feb. 14, 1925), p. 318 in an article entitled “Duelling In India”:  “Surgeon William Betty, of the Madras Service, was tried by court martial and cashiered on October 6th, 1803, for having killed, on September 7th, 1802, Lieut.-Colonel Sir Robert Hamilton, of the Bengal Army, in a duel at Amboyna, a small island in the Malay Archipelago, where they were present on military duty. Why Betty was tried by court martial, instead of being sent for trial by the Supreme Court, is not quite clear, but Amboyna was not British territory; it was therefore not within the jurisdiction of the Indian courts, and Hamilton and Betty were there on military duty. ... The order of court, quoted below, suggests that the court martial was rather for other breaches of military duty than for the duel itself. Two years later Betty was restored to the service by the Court of Directors, by an order dated April 18th, 1805, in which they state:  ““We have been influenced in our decision upon Mr. Betty’s case by the peculiar circumstances of his long arrest previous to his trial, and of his having been acquitted of all the charges brought against him, except that of breaking his arrest, in which he appears to have acted more from an error of judgment than intentional disobedience, and likewise by the very strong and unanimous recommendation of the court martial in his favour.”  From this order it seems that Betty must have been acquitted of the more serious charges and convicted only of a more or less technical offence. Presumably Hamilton was the aggressor and challenger.”

This includes the following:  Duffield, Mary Elizabeth - (1819 - 1914)  British floral and water colour painter. Mary Elizabeth Rosenberg was born at Bath, the eldest daughter of Thomas Elliott Rosenberg, the miniature and landscape painter, and the granddaughter of the silhouettist Charles Christian Rosenberg. Educated at Bath, she married (1850) William Duffield (1816 - 1863) the portraitist and still life painter. Specializing as a flower painter herself, in 1834 she was awarded a silver medal by the Society of Arts. In 1861, Mrs Duffield was elected a member of the Royal Institute of Painters in Water Colours, and also wrote a treatise on flower painting entitled, Art of Flower Painting (1856) which was reprinted several times. Her works were exhibited at the Royal Academy, the New Water Colour Society, and at the Grosvenor Gallery. Mrs Duffield had a long artistic career, and exhibited her works over a period of sixty years, the last being held in 1912, when she was ninety-two years old. From Somersetshire Parishes - A Handbook Of Historical Reference To All Places In The County by Arthur L. 		he had suffered from illness, and seeing, as they believed, the inroads that disease had made in his constitution, were not very sanguine as to the result. Mr. Hinde arrived in the colony in 1851, and in 1853 was appointed Clerk of Arraigns and Judge's Associate. In 1861, on Mr. Jickling's resignation of the office of Master of the Supreme Court, Mr. Hinde was appointed as his successor, and held that position, and also the office of Registrar of the Vice-Admiralty Court, until his death. He was held in high esteem by the members of the legal profession and all persons who were brought into contact with him officially. By a very huge circle of friends he was very much liked for his genial manner and kind-hearted disposition, and the news of his decease has caused great sorrow. He leaves a widow and sons and daughters.
